What are spouse contributions?

Spouse contributions allow you to contribute money to your spouse's super account. This helps grow your joint retirement savings and you may also receive a number of tax benefits.

If you are making the contribution, you are the contributing spouse. If the contribution is made on your behalf, you are the receiving spouse.

Who qualifies as a spouse?

A spouse is defined as a person (of any gender) who:

- You are legally married to, or
- Lives with you on a bona fide domestic basis (a de facto spouse)

You and your spouse must not be living separately on a permanent basis at the time you contribute.

What are the tax benefits of making spouse contributions?

There are a number of potential tax benefits in making spouse contributions. Spouse contributions are treated as non-concessional (after-tax) contributions, which means that, in your spouse's account, they are not subject to contributions tax and are tax-free upon withdrawal. You may also receive an 18% tax offset on the contributions you make to your spouse's account. As spouse contributions are non-concessional contributions, they count towards your spouse's non-concessional contribution cap.

Note: any investment earnings on the spouse contributions will be taxed like any other investment earnings of the super fund. Generally, this is at a tax rate of 15%.

Tax offset of 18%

Making spouse contributions is particularly beneficial if your spouse is not working or is a low income earner. If your spouse's total income is less than $37,000 a year, the first $3,000 of spouse contributions are eligible for an 18% tax offset (of up to $540 per year).

If your spouse's total income is higher than $37,000, the tax offset gradually reduces and ceases when your spouse's total income reaches $40,000.

Note: First Home Super Saver release amounts are not counted towards an individual's total income.

For more information, or a definition of these terms (including 'total income'), see the Australian Taxation Office's website at ato.gov.au.

The table below illustrates how the tax offset works:

Receiving spouse's annual income	Amount paid into receiving spouse's account	Maximum amount eligible for tax offset	Tax offset available to you
$20,000	$5,000	$3,000	$540
$37,000	$5,000	$3,000	$540
$38,000	$5,000	$2,000	$360
$39,000	$5,000	$1,000	$180
$40,000	$5,000	Nil	Nil

No tax offset is available where:

- The contributions are deductible by you
- The contributions are made to satisfy a family law obligation to split contributions with your spouse
- The receiving spouse has exceeded their non-concessional contributions cap for the financial year
- The receiving spouse's total super balance is equal to or exceeds the transfer balance cap (currently $1.9 million) on 30 June immediately before the financial year

A contributing spouse claims the tax offset through their personal income tax return.

When can you make a spouse contribution?

You can make a spouse contribution if you and your spouse are in a qualifying spouse relationship, are both Australian residents and, if your spouse (the receiving spouse) is under 75 years of age during the financial year.¹

For the 2022/23 financial year and onwards, your spouse will no longer need to meet either the work test or work test exemption to receive spouse contributions.

¹ We can only accept contributions made in respect of a member if they are received no later than 28 days after the month in which the member turns 75.

Opening an account for your spouse

If your spouse doesn't have an eligible GESB account, we will open one for them. See the 'Who qualifies as a spouse?' section above to check your spouse is eligible.

Consolidate and save

If your spouse consolidates all of their super into one account it will not only make it easier to manage, but they may also save on fees and charges if they only have one fund. It's now easier than ever – in most cases, all they need is their tax file number (TFN).

Your spouse can consolidate their super by completing a 'Super consolidation' form available at gesb.wa.gov.au/forms under 'Roll in other super' or visit Member Online and follow the links.

Note:

- We can only accept Superannuation Guarantee (SG) contributions from a State Government employer. If your spouse is employed but not in the WA public sector, they must retain a super account that can accept their SG contributions

Choose an investment plan

We offer a range of investment plans targeting different levels of risk and return, designed to give our members a choice as to how their money is invested.

Before making an investment choice, your spouse should read the 'Investment choice' brochure and the 'GESB Super Product Information Booklet' to learn about the investment plans and decide which one best suits their needs. These documents are available at gesb.wa.gov.au/brochures.

Once your spouse has received their new member welcome letter (which they will receive when joining GESB), they can change their investment plan at any time online either via Member Online or by completing the GESB Super 'Investment choice' and 'Super contributions' forms and submitting them along with a cheque or money order to us.

If they don't choose an investment plan, their funds will be invested in the default option for GESB Super members which is the My GESB Super plan.

When can spouse contributions be accessed?

Spouse contributions are subject to the same conditions of release as any other contributions.

For more information read the 'Accessing your super' brochure, available at gesb.wa.gov.au/brochures or call your Member Services Centre on 13 43 72.

Section 4 Receiving spouse's tax file number (TFN)

To be read and completed by receiving spouse.

We are authorised to collect your TFN for certain purposes, however you are not obligated to provide your TFN to us. As spouse contributions are personal after-tax contributions, we can only accept your spouse contributions if you provide your TFN.

Before you provide us with your TFN please note:

We may disclose your TFN to other super funds, when your benefits are being transferred, unless you request in writing that we don't.

It's not an offence for you not to provide us with your TFN. However giving your TFN to us will have the following advantages (which may not otherwise apply):

- We will be able to accept all types of contributions to your account(s)
- The tax on contributions to your super account(s) will not increase
- Other than the tax that may ordinarily apply, no additional tax will be deducted when you start drawing down your super benefits, and
- It will make it much easier to trace different super accounts in your name so that you receive all your super benefits when you retire

If you do not provide your TFN:

- You may pay more tax on your super benefits than you have to
- Additional tax may be applied to super contributions made by your employer (including salary sacrifice contributions)
- We may be unable to accept your personal, after-tax contributions which could affect your eligibility for the Australian Government Super Co-contribution
- You may be unnecessarily liable for the Super Contributions Surcharge in relation to contributions pre-1 July 2005
- It may be more difficult to locate and amalgamate your super benefits in the future

The purpose for which your TFN can be used and the consequences of not providing it may change in the future as a result of changes in the law.

For more information on providing your TFN to your super fund, visit ato.gov.au or call the ATO Superannuation Helpline on 13 10 20.
