Spouse contributions

What are spouse contributions?

Spouse contributions allow you to contribute money to your spouse’s super account. This helps grow your joint retirement savings and you may also receive a number of tax benefits.

If you are making the contribution, you are the contributing spouse. If the contribution is made on your behalf, you are the receiving spouse.

Who qualifies as a spouse?

A spouse is defined as:

> Your husband, wife or de facto partner who lives permanently with you on a bona fide domestic basis (including same sex couples and partners). You and your spouse must not be living separately on a permanent basis at the time you contribute.

What are the tax benefits of making spouse contributions?

There are a number of potential tax benefits in making spouse contributions. Spouse contributions are treated as ‘non-concessional (after-tax) contributions’, which means that, in your spouse’s account, they are not subject to contributions tax and could be tax-free upon withdrawal. You may also receive an 18% tax offset on the contributions you make to your spouse’s account. As spouse contributions are non-concessional (after-tax) contributions, they count towards your spouse’s non-concessional contribution cap.

Tax offset of 18%

Making spouse contributions is particularly beneficial if your spouse is not working or is a low income earner. If your spouse’s assessable income plus reportable employer super contributions and reportable fringe benefits (total income) is less than $37,000 a year, the first $3,000 of spouse contributions are eligible for an 18% tax offset. This is up to the maximum offset of $540 per year.

If your spouse’s total income is higher than $37,000, the tax offset gradually reduces and ceases when your spouse’s total income reaches $40,000.

The table below illustrates how the tax offset works:

<tr>

<th>Amount paid into receiving spouse’s account</th>
<th>Maximum amount eligible for tax offset</th>

No tax offset is available where the receiving spouse has exceeded their non-concessional contributions cap or their super balance is $1.6 million or more.

In order to receive spouse contributions, the following criteria must be met:

- You and your spouse must be in a qualifying spouse relationship
- You and your spouse are both Australian residents
- Your spouse is under 65 years of age, and
- For receiving spouses aged over 65, but less than 70, you can only contribute if they have worked at least 40 hours in a period of no more than 30 consecutive days in this financial year, or, your spouse is exempt from the work test as they meet the following conditions:
  - Are aged between 65-74 years
  - Have met the work test in the previous financial year
  - Had a total superannuation balance of less than $300,000 at the end of the previous financial year, and
  - Haven’t previously relied on the work test exemption to make contributions

A contributing spouse then claims the tax offset through their personal income tax return.

Lower tax on final benefit

Payments from your spouse’s super account may attract a lower tax rate than benefits paid from your super account. For example, if your spouse has reached their Commonwealth preservation age¹, is under 60 and accumulates a limited amount of super benefits before they retire, their final benefit may fall below their low rate cap and therefore their final benefit may be taxed at a lower rate or not at all.

¹ Your Commonwealth preservation age is dependent on your date of birth. For more information on your preservation age, read the ‘Accessing your super’ brochure available at gesb.wa.gov.au/brochures
For more information on low rate caps, refer to the ‘Contributing to your super’ brochure and relevant Product Information Booklet available at gesb.wa.gov.au/brochures or call your Member Services Centre on 13 43 72.

Opening an account for your spouse

If your spouse doesn’t have an eligible GESB account, we will open one for them. See the ‘Who qualifies as a spouse?’ section to check your spouse is eligible.

Consolidate and save

If your spouse consolidates all of their super into one account it will not only make it easier to manage, but they may also save on fees and charges if they only have one fund. It’s now easier than ever – in most cases, all they need is their tax file number (TFN).

Your spouse can consolidate their super by completing a ‘Super consolidation’ form available at gesb.wa.gov.au/forms or visit Member Online and follow the links.

Notes:
• Other funds may charge a fee when super benefits are withdrawn and you should consider the impact that withdrawal will have on other benefits such as insurance cover.
• We can only accept Superannuation Guarantee (SG) contributions from a State government employer. If your spouse is employed but not in the State public sector, they must retain a super account that can accept their SG contributions.

Choose an investment plan

We offer a range of investment plans targeting different levels of risk and return, designed to give our members a choice as to how their money is invested.

Before making an investment choice, your spouse should read the ‘Investment choice’ brochure and the ‘GESB Super Product Information Booklet’ to learn about the investment plans and decide which one best suits their needs. These documents are available at gesb.wa.gov.au/brochures.

Once your spouse has received their new member welcome letter (which they will receive when joining GESB) they can change their investment plan at any time online either via Member Online or by completing the GESB Super ‘Investment choice’ and ‘Super contributions’ forms and submitting them along with a cheque or money order to us.

If they don’t choose an investment plan, their funds will be invested in the default option for GESB Super members which is the ‘My GESB Super’ plan.

When can spouse contributions be accessed?

Spouse contributions are subject to the same conditions of release as any other contributions.

For more information read the ‘Accessing your super’ brochure, available at gesb.wa.gov.au/brochures or call your Member Services Centre on 13 43 72.

We are authorised to collect your TFN for certain purposes, however you are not obligated to provide your TFN to us. As spouse contributions are personal after-tax contributions, we can only accept your spouse contributions if you provide your TFN.

Before you provide us with your TFN please note:

We are authorised to collect your TFN under the Superannuation Industry (Supervision) Act 1993, which will only be used for lawful purposes. These purposes may change in the future.

We may disclose your TFN to other super funds, when your benefits are being transferred, unless you request in writing that we don’t.

It’s not an offence for you not to provide us with your TFN. However giving your TFN to us will have the following advantages (which may not otherwise apply):

- We will be able to accept all types of contributions to your account(s)
- The tax on contributions to your super account(s) will not increase

Other than the tax that may ordinarily apply, no additional tax will be deducted when you start drawing down your super benefits, and

It will make it much easier to trace different super accounts in your name so that you receive all your super benefits when you retire

If you do not provide your TFN:

- You may pay more tax on your super benefits than you have to
- Additional tax may be applied to super contributions made by your employer (including salary sacrifice contributions)
- We may be unable to accept your personal, after-tax contributions which could affect your eligibility for the Commonwealth Government Super Co-contribution
- You may be unnecessarily liable for the Super Contributions Surcharge in relation to contributions pre-1 July 2005
- It may be more difficult to locate and amalgamate your super benefits in the future

The purpose for which your TFN can be used and the consequences of not providing it may change in the future as a result of changes in the law.

For more information on providing your TFN to your super fund, visit ato.gov.au or call the ATO Superannuation Helpline on 13 10 20.
